

To Sip Darjeeling at Dawn

By Donna Pucciani

Virtual Artists Collective. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 88 pages. Dimensions: 8.9in. x 5.9in. x 0.3in. To Sip Darjeeling at Dawn, by Donna Pucciani, is an intriguing poetic journey through diverse existential moments: returning to the city of ones youth, playing a musical instrument, waiting for lightning, mourning a parent, anticipating ones own death. Her objects of meditation include a vase from Copenhagen, an English summer day, strawberries and frogs, old lovers and new affairs, gardens and cats, gumbo and fugues, a husband who snores. Whether in a Manhattan art gallery or an old amusement park in New Orleans, Pucciani reveals intimate moments of her own life while inviting the reader to share in those moments. Her poetry, which has been published on four continents and translated into Italian and Chinese, invokes universal themes of love and loss, nostalgia and grief, and the joys of the present moment. More importantly, her poems explore the human condition with depth, sensitivity and compassion. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg,OR, La Vergne,TN.
