Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: .that the inventory should be taken with reference to the current market price. The foundation of the running inventory is the stock ledger with its accompanying daily record of goods bought and goods sold. The ledger is headed according to the various classes of goods dealt in and as convenience and experience may suggest. Each account is charged with the goods received, and credited with the goods sold. This is done every day. At the close of business, the inventory is taken off according to the balances as shown on the ledger. The prices and extensions are made according to the state of the market. The total of the inventory sheet shows the value of the goods on hand. This may, at first sight, seem rather a large task, but a liberal use of printed forms, and a careful study of the peculiarities of the business, will bring the work within a comparatively small compass. In the general daily statement, the inventory will show as follows: 1. Merchandise sales (from general ledger). $ 2. Merchandise on hand (from inventory) 3. Total proceeds of merchandise 4. Mdse. purchases (from general ledger) 5. Gain on Mdse 6. $ Mdse. on hand (from inventory as above). The inventory is entered again on the left of the statement in order to Jteep it in balance, and to show the merchandise on hand as a resource. The system outlined above seems to cover all the requirements of a daily statement of a mercantile...
