So Pilate takes the initiative, and reopens the case, issuing a general call to the accusers of Jesus, and the people, calling them together again. Therefore, when they were gathered together (Matthew). Do teachers, students of the Bible, and Christian publications believe, and teach according to this scripture Nay verily! If the readers of the New Testament would give more attention, and careful study on this point, there would not be such unbelievable and absurd teachings as to the time occupied in the seven different trials of Jesus, in four different places, and before three different tribunals. The theory, that from the time of his arrest, about midnight, to about six o'clock the next morning, was ample time for all of these trials, in the different places, is unreasonable, incredible, and without authority or proof in the scriptures. A few years ago the writer desiring to have some scriptural light on this theory, of the trials and crucifixion of Christ, submitted the following queries to a religious journal of great authority on these questions. The reply is published in full, with comments thereon, that the reader may judge of the merits of the explanations given. Queries Submitted. Will you kindly explain and answer the following questions 1. Was Thursday, Nisan the 14th, a preparation day 2. Do the scriptures teach that Jesus was crucified on a preparation day 3. If so, why is it..
